Biles dazzles on floor to win record 25th world championship medal

Biles won another gold for breathtaking floor routine.

American Simone Biles became the most decorated gymnast in world championship history on Sunday when she won the beam and floor finals to take her career tally to 25 medals.

Soon after securing a convincing victory on the beam in Stuttgart to overtake Belarusian Vitaly Scherbo's record tally of 23 world medals, the 22-year-old Biles successfully defended her floor title to win medal number 25.

The four-time Olympic champion is now the owner of 19 gold medals across four championships against 12 for Scherbo, who competed in five world events between 1991 and 1996.

Making her final appearance of the week in front of a raucous crowd, Biles wasted no time as she landed a superb triple-twisting double back flip — known as the Biles II — on her first pass.

Biles's double layout with a half turn — another skill named after her — put her out of bounds for a 0.1 penalty but she did enough to post a winning score of 15.133.

ALL IMAGES REUTERS

"This is really the best worlds performance I have ever put out."

Simone Biles

other skill named after her — put her out of bounds for a 0.1 penalty but she did enough to post a winning score of 15.133.

"Honestly, I just couldn't move. I was so tired," Biles said of her final pose on the stage.

"This is really the best worlds performance I have ever put out."

The Americans took a one-two finish as Sunisa Lee finished with 14.133 for the silver medal, while Russian Angelina Melnikova came third.

Earlier, Biles delivered a polished routine on the beam before a full twisting double tuck dismount for an impressive 15.066.

Although Biles had twice before won the world beam title, in 2014 and 2015, it has not always been plain sailing for her on the apparatus.

Her slip on the landing of a front tucked somersault at the 2016 Rio Olympics meant she had to settle for a bronze in the event. Last year again, she dropped off the beam during the women's all-around final at the world championships.

But she has regained her swagger this week, under the watchful eyes of balance beam coach Cecile Landi, and posted top scores in all four attempts — qualifying, the team and all-around finals and Sunday's apparatus final.

"It meant a lot because Cecile has really been working on bringing my confidence back up to where it used to be on the beam," Biles said.

"To go out there and nail the routine, just like I do in practice, it felt really good and I knew she was really proud."

As another title-winning score was announced in the arena, Biles punched the air in jubilation before joining celebrations with the U.S. team.

"I was really excited," she added. "I thought it was going to be at least 14.8, 14.9, but to see 15, I was like well that's pretty crazy, so I was very proud."

Last year's winner Liu Tingting of China took silver with 14.433, while team mate Li Shijia won the bronze.

Biles finished her campaign in Stuttgart with five gold medals from six events to mark ideal preparations for next year's Tokyo Olympics.

Her barnstorming run included a record fifth all-around gold, an individual vault title, as well as helping the U.S. to a fifth straight world team title. REUTERS

Trump defends Giuliani in tweet after federal probe

2 U.S. President Donald Trump defended his attorney Rudy Giuliani on Saturday as a "legendary crime buster" and "wonderful lawyer" after a media report that prosecutors are investigating whether the former New York mayor broke lobbying laws in his dealings in Ukraine. "So now they are after the legendary 'crime buster' and greatest Mayor in the history of NYC, Rudy Giuliani," Trump said in a statement on Twitter. "He may seem a little rough around the edges sometimes, but he is also a great guy and wonderful lawyer. Such a one sided Witch Hunt going on in USA. Deep State. Shameful!" he tweeted. The New York Times reported late on Friday that federal prosecutors in Manhattan were investigating Giuliani's actions regarding Ukraine. REUTERS

Hunter Biden disputes Trump attacks of his work

3 Hunter Biden, the son of former U.S. Vice President Joe Biden, for the first time on Sunday defended his work in Ukraine and China, after sustained criticism from Republican President Donald Trump that has in turn embroiled the White House in an impeachment inquiry. Hunter Biden, who has remained silent for months in the face of the attacks, said through his attorney that he was stepping down from the board of a Chinese company that has been the subject of criticism from Trump and his allies. He added that he would not work for a foreign-owned company if his father is elected president in 2020. Hunter Biden intends to step down from the board by Oct. 31, according to the statement. He did not give a reason for his decision to leave the board. REUTERS

U.S. to pull last troops from north Syria

4 The United States is poised to withdraw some 1,000 troops from northern Syria, its defense secretary said on Sunday, after learning that Turkey planned to extend its military incursion against Kurdish militia further south than originally planned. Another consideration in the decision, U.S. Defense Secretary Mark Esper indicated, was that Washington's Kurdish-led ally, the Syrian Democratic Forces (SDF), were looking to make a deal with Russia to counter the Turkish onslaught. A Syrian Kurdish politician told Reuters the SDF and Syrian government were in talks at a Russian airbase on how to halt Turkey's attack, and Syrian state media said Syrian soldiers were being sent north to confront the offensive. REUTERS

Kim Gordon on going solo with "No Home Record"

The first solo record
from the Sonic Youth
legend is out today

PAT KING

After decades of pushing the boundaries of punk rock with her enormously influential band Sonic Youth as well as creating challenging and renowned works as a visual artist, perhaps the most radical statement Kim Gordon could make at this point is to release an album with only her name written down the spine. Released today on Matador records, Gordon's first solo album, "No Home Record," is nine songs that represent an artist truly unbound by preconceptions. From the first sonic blasts of the industrial-tinged "Sketch Artist," the record practically begs you to form an opinion before it goes off balance with each song that follows. It's similar to that feeling when you exit the bumper cars at a carnival and are happy the seat belts worked yet immediately want to go again.

When I spoke with Gordon over the phone, she explained that the record had come about after randomly meeting with producer Justin Raisen, who has worked with Charli XCX, Angel Olsen and Ariel Pink. To her recollection, working on a record with Raisen just seemed like something fun to do in between art shows and her work in the avant-garde duo Body/Head with musician Bill Nace.

"I didn't really think about it that much," Gordon says of the project coming to fruition. "I wasn't that busy at the time. It started when I accidentally met Justin, who was trying to get me to come over and sing on this other project. He kept sending me stuff. I was kind of skeptical and curious. So finally he sent me a piece of music that I thought I could do vocals on and add to what was already there. I did that and he took some leftover bits and put some trashy drums on it and bass to it. He sent it back to me and it was kind of trashy and cool."

After Gordon added some guitar parts and the recording was mixed, that song turned out to be one of the central tracks on the album, "Murdered Out." From there, this kind of spontaneous workflow energized Gordon and she was ready to focus on what would become "No Home Record."

"It was sort of an experiment for me just to see what it could be," explains Gordon. "Justin is sort of positive about everything. It was almost like a challenge [to say] 'make something out of this mother f---er!' I knew that with his expertise as a producer, that's what you want him to do, elevate what you do. I thought it was interesting to take things that were improv and shape them into a song."

The album teeters between beat-heavy industrial tracks as well as the Lower East Side No-Wave inspired punk Gordon helped create with Sonic Youth. All throughout, Gordon muses on the modern malaise of this current era and the devaluation of the creative spirit on the biting track, "Don't Play It Back." In that song, she delivers puzzle pieces of free associated poetry on how artistic expression is being taken for granted. "I used to have a gallery," she sings. "Now it's just a floor shop. I hope the world don't turn away."

"It really captures a feeling of being at a coffee place or something and hearing different bits of conversations," Gordon explains of the track. "It's about gentrification and the ideas around 'are we really free' and the illusions of choice."

For Gordon, the thought that anyone would ever pay her to express herself creatively had never entered her mind when she was initially starting out. Art on the fringes was what seemed the most alive and rewarding at the time and it still is today.

"I started [in punk rock in the Lower East Side] because I thought it was more pure and free than the art world at the time in the 80s which was having a big commercial boom. No-Wave music, which inspired me, seemed more like a form of expression and nobody thought of it as commercial," says Gordon.

As of right now, there are no plans to tour behind "No Home Record" until at least 2020. While she wasn't busy with art shows before, Gordon is now currently working on a new collection that will keep her busy throughout the rest of the year.

"I have a show now that I have to work on that opens in January," she says. "So after that, I'll start putting a band together and that kind of thing."

Bill Belichick has plenty of criticism he's willing to dish out.

GETTY IMAGES

Belichick loving the Pats' imperfect, perfect start

Despite the 6-0 record, the Patriots have a boatload of flaws.

MATT BURKE
matt.burke@metro.us

This imperfect perfection that the Patriots have going right now is right up Bill Belichick's alley.

The Pats are 6-0, which is great and all, but in each of their last four games (Jets, Bills, Redskins, Giants) there have been major miscues.

Part of the problem with the 2007 Patriots and their undefeated season quest that came up short was that the team was too dominant early in the year. In essence, they peaked too early.

Belichick could pick nits in the film room until he was blue in the face with that team, but at some point — consciously or subconsciously — players thought he was full of bull excrement.

When you're rolling teams at a historic clip, and the media and fans are consistently telling you how great you are, it's difficult to "ignore the noise," as Belichick likes to say.

The undefeated start this season is vastly different, as no one is buying the current Patriots roster as unstoppable.

First and foremost, there are major problems with the offense, starting with the sieve that is the offensive line. Tom Brady is starting to look his age, too, as he threw an interception in the end zone in the Bills game, threw an interception in the red zone against the Redskins, and threw an INT against the Giants this past Thursday immediately after the Pats defense got a pick of their own.

Brady eventually corrected things in both the Redskins and Giants games to come away with respectable stat lines, but anyone who watched both games could see that, overall, TB12 was mighty shaky.

As for the defense, the Patriots have been statistically dominant, as they are first in the NFL in total yards allowed, first in passing yards allowed, first in points per game allowed, and third in

Tom Brady has thrown a combined 14 interceptions in the past two seasons (24 games). In the 2016 and 2017 seasons combined (28 games), Brady threw just 10 INTs.

rushing yards allowed.

But there have been warning signs over the past two weeks that this defense might not be all it's cracked up to be.

The Pats D allowed a 65-yard TD run by Washington wide receiver Steven Sims eight days ago and allowed a 64-yard TD reception to Giants receiver Golden Tate on Thursday.

The Patriots will be facing offenses that are worlds better than the Redskins and Giants in the coming weeks as the Browns, Ravens, Eagles and Cowboys all have elite playmakers.

All told, this imperfection on both sides of the ball is music to Belichick's ears. He can legitimately tell his team that they're not that good and the proof will be on the tape.

Aries A roadblock will occur if you are vocal about your plans. Feel out situations before you reveal your ideas. A change someone makes will leave you questioning your next move.

Taurus Your plans are likely to change unexpectedly. Be prepared to go with the flow and to take care of business as usual. Turn instability into opportunity. Romance is in the stars.

Gemini Hidden matters will be revealed. Before you get involved in someone else's affairs, make sure you haven't got anything to hide. A relationship will be on shaky ground.

Cancer Don't fear change when it's being left behind that you should be worrying about. Align yourself with people who are progressive and ready to make a difference. A friendship will lead to new beginnings.

Leo Stick to what's tried and true. Tread lightly around the people you deal with daily. It's best to be a good listener if you want to get the lowdown and stay in control.

Virgo Learn all you can. The information you gather will encourage you to pick up new skills that will help you explore alternative ways to earn a living.

Libra Consider what you want to do next. Be open to suggestions, but don't lose sight of your long-term goal. Set priorities and put your plans in motion.

Scorpio Make your move before someone tries to intervene. Staying one step ahead of anyone who tries to challenge you will help you to gain support and respect and to form a notable partnership.

Sagittarius Stay on top of your responsibilities to avoid falling behind or being criticized. Don't ignore a detail that could influence the outcome of a situation you face. Set goals and boundaries.

Capricorn Set standards, embrace change and put your best foot forward. Home and professional progress can be made if you aren't afraid to take a chance on someone or something new.
